RELATIVE VALUES

THE FULLY LOADED MINI MANSION

Running water, working refrigerators, home theaters. These backyard playhouses come move-in ready (kids not included)

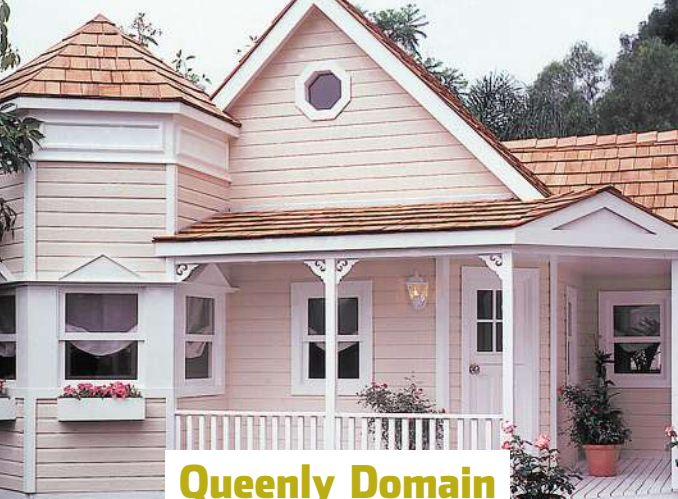

Pink Towers
Pittsburgh Spanish-style playhouse
About $15,000

Specs: 60½-square-feet, with turrets and faux brick
Features: Behind the hot-pink door is an open-concept floor plan that includes a living room with fireplace and eat-in kitchen. (Note to fire marshal: The fireplace and stove don't actually work.) A second-story loft has one tower that leads to a rock wall out back and a slide out front. A second tower services a tube slide. A hidden room under the towers, located behind a swinging bookshelf, is suitable for sharing deep secrets, such as who swiped the pumpkin from the neighbor's porch.

Mirthfully Medieval
Monte Sereno, Calif., 'Castle Dragon'
$234,300

Specs: A 790-square-foot, redwood playhouse, built around a tree
Features: Hand-carved, fire-breathing dragons flank the stage area of the theater. (Sticky floors and creaky seats not included.) Also on the lower level is a maze with secret doors and passageways. The enclosed clubhouse is waterproofed and password-protected to keep intruders out. But in case of a siege, there's a secret escape door under one of the benches. And as an antidote to idleness, there is a tube slide, a swinging bridge, a rope net, crazy bars and a rock-climbing wall.
Maker: Barbara Butler, San Francisco

Queenly Domain
Los Angeles Victorian-style playhouse
About $50,000

Specs: A 224-square-foot house with wraparound porch
Features: The materials define this abode. Floral tiles on the kitchen walls are hand-painted and cut to scale. Custom-made furniture throughout is made from sustainable hardwood. And when Bieber fever strikes, the occupant can retreat to the media room, equipped with a TV. A kitchen furnished with a refrigerator and running water make entertaining easy. Upstairs is a vaulted loft with two twin beds.
Maker: La Petite Maison, Fort Lupton, Colo.; designer, the Lollipop Tree Inc., Charleston, S.C.
